

MISREMEMBERING Dr. King

Thursday, January 18, 2018

1:00-2:00 P.M

We all know the name. Martin Luther King Jr., the great American civil rights leader. But most people today know relatively little about King, the campaigner against militarism, materialism, and racism—what he called the "giant triplets."

Presentation by Dr. Jennifer Yanco.

Dr. Yanco is a Visiting Researcher at the African Studies Center at Boston University. She holds a master's degree from the Harvard School of Public Health where she specialized in the social and political determinants of health and worked for a number of years as a women's health advocate. Dr. Yanco has a Ph.D. in Linguistics and African Studies from Indiana University and has taught for many years for the Boston University African Language Program, focusing on curriculum and materials development for Lingala, Hausa, and Setswana. She has organized and taught intensive summer language programs in Hausa and Setswana and recently co-directed a four-week Fulbright Hays Seminar Abroad for US faculty in Senegal. Yanco spent many years in Niger, involved in various aspects of language education and served for two years as a Fulbright senior lecturer in Linguistics at the Université de Niamey. She is the author of the recent book, Misremembering Dr. King: A History of the 1929-1968

Program is free and open to the public.
