In 1842, Harriet finally escaped to the north where she became active in the anti-slavery movement and wrote the book Incidents in the life of a slave girl, which was published in Boston 1860 under the pen name of Linda Brent. AUTHOR TALK

Boyah J. Farah presents America Made me Black

IN-PERSON

Thursday, February 23 at 6:30 p.m.

Lecture Hall, Main Library

Farah will be talking with Huey Hewitt, a Presidential Scholar and a Ph.D. candidate in the Department of African & African American Studies at Harvard. Born in Somalia and raised among nomads, Boyah Farah grew up with a code of male bravado that helped him survive deprivation, disease, and civil war; he believed that code would help him succeed in his new country. Rather than safety and freedom, though, Boyah found systemic racism, police brutality, and intense prejudice in all areas of life, including the workplace. He learned not only what it meant to be an African in America, but what it means to be African American. The code of masculinity that shaped generations of men in his family could not prepare Farah for the painful realities of life in the United States. Registration is required to participate in this program.
