Collection Description:

Collections of items associated with the Frederick Hastings Rindge collection, 1852-2001. These items are related to the Cambridge Manual Training School, later renamed the Rindge Manual Training School in 1899. This collection has been assembled from multiple sources, but the bulk of the materials were gifted by Stephen G. Surette. Formats include photographs, documents, correspondence, and objects.

Historical Note:

The Cambridge Manual Training School for Boys was founded by Frederick Hastings Rindge in September 1888. Between 1888 and 1890, Rindge funded the construction of Cambridge City Hall, the Cambridge Public Library, and the Cambridge Manual Training School. In 1892, the Cambridge English High School moved into a spacious new building on Broadway, developing land that Rindge had presented to Cambridge. The EHS's old building at Broadway and Fayette was remodeled, and the Cambridge Latin School (later the Cambridge High and Latin School) moved in. The Cambridge School Committee renamed the school Rindge Manual Training School in 1899 in honor of Mr. Rindge after he retired. Considering its broadened offerings in technical education, the school was later renamed Rindge Technical School. In 1977, the Rindge Technical School merged with the Cambridge High and Latin School to form the Cambridge Rindge and Latin School (CRLS). This school is managed under the Cambridge Public School District.
